

Reimagining and Reconstructing Homes for Life

For us, aging in place is more than just adding ramps and grab bars.

Growing older in the home, in a familiar and beloved neighborhood, is an ideal that many people hold. Reimagining and remodeling a home for improved functionality, safety, and comfort are often preferred to the option of downsizing belongings and moving to a retirement community.

Multigenerational

If you and your family are exploring co-housing and include several generations, our aging in place methodology is a practical and convenient option.

Retain independence

By accommodating new physical needs or mobility requirements, independence and dignity are kept inside the comfort and familiarity of the home.

Peace of mind

Worry and concern fade when specific needs are met by better function, design, and safety considerations.

Better living, for a long life

Just one example:

Improved accessibility to kitchen appliances, tools, and ingredients will keep a homeowner cooking (not just reheating or microwave-ing processed foods) longer.

This translates to better overall nutrition, more physical and mental activity, and improved quality of life for longer.

What you can expect from Pathway Design & Construction:

- We craft our aging in place alterations inside of a spacious and beautiful Universal Design.
- Full service and communication throughout the remodel process: before, during, and after.
- Creativity, respect, practical solutions based on proven experience.
- Trusted, long-term employees, trade partners, and consultants.

Aging in place inside a Universal Design: beauty, safety, functionality

For those who desire and deserve the best quality of life possible, especially in their home.